

Civilian Conservation Corps

The Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) was established in 1933 as a NEW DEAL program to combat unemployment in the United States during the DEPRESSION OF THE 1930s. Unemployed, unmarried young men were enlisted to work on conservation and resource-development projects such as soil conservation, flood control, and protection of forests and wildlife. Enrollees were provided with food, lodging, and other necessities, and were given a small monthly salary. In 1935, 2,600 CCC camps had an enrollment of 500,000. The CCC was abolished in 1942.

In 1933 Congress created the Civilian Conservation Corps (C.C.C.). It provides work for unmarried and unemployed men between the ages of seventeen and twenty-three years. The C.C.C. leaders and camps are under the direction of the United States War Department. The National Youth Administration (N.Y.A.), created in 1935, helps young people between the ages of sixteen and twenty-four. It provides vocational training and part-time or full-time employment.

Danbury

Danbury is a city in southwestern Connecticut with a population of 65,585 (1990 census). Although known for the production of hats since before the Revolutionary War, Danbury now has a diversified industrial base. The city expanded significantly in the 1960s and '70s (the city limits were extended in 1965). Danbury was settled in 1685 and incorporated in 1702. The Danbury Fair, held annually from about 1820 and one of the largest fairs in New England, was discontinued in 1981.
